Estonia energy storage project

Overview

Estonian renewable energy developer Evecon, together with French independent power producer Corsica Sole and international investment fund Mirova, on 3 February opened a one of the largest battery energy storage facility in the Baltics in the Estonian parish of Kiisa. Estonian renewable energy developer Evecon, together with French independent power producer Corsica Sole and international investment fund Mirova, on 3 February opened a one of the largest battery energy storage facility in the Baltics in the Estonian parish of Kiisa. The 100 MW/200 MWh battery energy storage project in Kiisa began operation on February 3 as scheduled – just two weeks after a testing fault at the facility caused the most significant disturbance to the regional power grid since Estonia's desynchronization from the Russian electricity system. Developers say it will bring greater energy security in the wake of decoupling from the Russian BRELL grid last year, and connection to the continental European grid. This news is reported by ESS News. The facility, named Hertz 1, is one of the largest battery energy storage facilities in the Baltics and is located in the Estonian parish of Kiisa, just south of. Baltic Storage Platform, a joint venture (JV), has broken ground on two new 200MW/400MWh battery energy storage systems (BESS) in Estonia.
